"THE UNCHASTENED WOMAN" COMING TO THE ORPHEUM

Mr. Oliver Morosco who has produced as many successful stage plays as any producing manager of his time has scored another triumph this season in Louis K. Auspacher's comedy drama, "The Unchastened Woman," that he produced at the Thirty-ninth Street theatre, New York City, where it ran for seven months, the most talked about play in the city and he has also made a new star out of that delightful actress, Miss Emily Stevens. Mr. Auspacher's play is said to be particularly novel and very interesting and the heroine to be provoking, pretty, selfish, shameless and utterly unscrupulous who plays with fire and loves her sins, as it would seem for her own sake. Caroline Knollys, the part played by Miss Stevens, is a spoilt child of fortune—a creature whose instinctive voice has, till the play begins to be rehearsed, been in the hands of a great actress. But Caroline is at least chaste and her wickednesses are committed with a smile. Much can be forgiven in a pretty woman who laughingly does what she does, and Caroline is a particularly interesting character. The play is said to be brilliantly written and is strong, intense and very human, the story being well told in three acts. Mr. Morosco will present Miss Stevens and the entire New York company with the original production at the Orpheum theatre next Thursday, May 11. Seats are now on sale.

STOVEPIPE EASILY CUT
"Some people are greatly puzzled how to cut stovepipe when it is necessary to have short lengths. I just punch a small hole in the pipe and use a can opener for all but the seam, which can be bent back and forth till it breaks, or can be cut with a small chisel."
